House 5102

The renovation of this single-story house in Barcelona's urban fabric incorporates an extension that expands the living space while respecting the original staircase and character. The intervention combines the restoration of pre-existing elements with a light and contemporary addition, designed to optimize natural light and the connection to the outdoors. The bedrooms are distributed across the two floors and organized around a double-height central space that houses the living areas and visually connects them to the patio. This vertical void facilitates communication between floors and reinforces the feeling of spaciousness and spatial continuity. The use of natural materials and sustainable construction solutions contributes to creating an efficient, warm home adapted to contemporary lifestyles.
